

Foreign company with tasks in Denmark?

Registration in RUT Register for Foreign Service Providers

Does your company perform interim tasks in Denmark?

Then your company must be registered in the Register for Foreign Service Providers/ Registret for Udenlandske Tjenesteydere (RUT).

When a foreign company has tasks in Denmark, the company must be registered in RUT.

You must report information about the individual tasks the company performs in Denmark and about the employees who are seconded to Denmark.

This is what you do:

On www.virk.dk/RUT you will find the forms that must be completed when you are to register your company and when you are to register the tasks that will be solved in Denmark.

You can also find more information here about RUT and the terms and conditions that apply when working in Denmark.

What is the information used for?

The information in the register is used by the Danish authorities who conduct inspections that the Danish regulations regarding, e.g. working environment and tax are complied with.

Which deadlines apply?

The registration of a new task/secondment must occur at the latest simultaneously with the commencement of the work. If there are changes to the information, the company must report this at the latest 8 days after the change has had effect.

If your company has to be VAT registered, this must occur at the latest 8 days before the work commences.

What happens if I do not submit the information?

Companies that do not submit the information on time can have a fine imposed. This also applies if the company submits information too late (after the work has commenced) or if the information is insufficient.
